To Whom It May Concern,

I have taught in the same school with Kevin Collins for fifteen years. During the last nine years we have worked closely together, teaching fourth grade in classrooms directly across the hall from each other.

Here are a few observations of this exemplary educator: Kevin arrives at work early and often stays late to make sure his classroom runs smoothly and effectively. Kevin is creative and innovative and is always looking for ways to improve his delivery of content. His students enjoy being in his classroom and take pride in being able to say, "Mr. Collins is my teacher." He is a great team member: willing to share ideas and carry more than his share of the load. Kevin's classroom is visually inviting with student created ideas and materials covering the walls. He is organized and keeps meticulous files of topics taught in our fourth grade curriculum. His sense of humor is also appreciated by coworkers and students.

Please consider Kevin Collins when you are interviewing. He has proven himself to be an asset to our school in every respect.

Sincerely,

Gary Horning
